Welcome to Make New Friends!
 The idea here is to celebrate and get to know and introduce you to my friends as well as for me to pay homage to them. Gigs are mainly ratted off over the years if art routine part dream. We often think we are going somewhere but in reality we are already there. You are reading this 'right there'! Tomorrow is an abstraction. The past is a selective memory so we need to vibe in the moment especially when we are being creative. You would be surprised at the sub-conscious ripple your creativity makes in the pond of boredom. When you get out and share with your friends, old and new, especially in our current tech dystopia. People are on their

GT: Are there any common conditions that make for a good DIY scene?
 MNF: I don't know. I've seen a lot of places that are really good. I think it's more about the people than the place. I've seen a lot of places that are really good. I think it's more about the people than the place.
